

NEW YORKER A RIVER HERO.

Saves Two Hartford Men From Drowning in Connecticut.
HARTFORD, Conn., April 4.—George Sherwood, an employee of the Barnum Map Company at No. 11 Broadway, New York, late yesterday plunged into the Connecticut River, and, cheered by crowds along the banks, saved the lives of two of his Hartford friends, Harold Hansen of No. 43 Buckingham Street, and Arthur R. Adams of No. 446 Franklin Avenue.

The three went to the east side to view the swollen river and the inundated meadows of East Hartford. Just before dark they stepped on some soft snow which appeared to have firm ground beneath it, and in a moment were bounding in the river. Sherwood gained the shore, took off his outer clothing and leaped back into the chilly waters. He insinuated Hansen and Adams to the limbs of an overhanging tree, whence they were taken to safety.

SEMINARY MISS FINDS IT HARD TO BE A SHOPLIFTER

Pretty Troy Girl Held as Thief Describes Education in Crime.

ARRESTED IN BOSTON.

Men Caught With Alice Woods, 18 Years Old, Sent to Jail.

Shoplifting, burglary and plain larceny are difficult arts to master even under the tutelage of thorough and exacting teachers. Alice Woods, an eighteen-year-old girl, who says she has been stealing for a living during the last four months, says the longer she worked at it the more obstacles she found. This morning at Police Headquarters, where she had been taken to be photographed and to have her fingerprints and other measurements recorded, Alice told of her adventures in the underworld.

"I am glad that I am safe in jail instead of dodging detectives and puzzling my brain over new plans for stealing," she said. "Last November I came to New York from Troy, and thought I'd get a job here in a millinery store or with the movies or something. One morning I was in a restaurant when two men spoke to me. They asked me what I was doing. I told them I was looking for a job. They offered me a job and I jumped at the chance.

"They explained that we could make an easy living shoplifting, and then gave me lessons in stealing skirts, laces and waists and other things from department stores. I was to go up to a counter and look over waists and other materials, and push stuff toward my confederates. They were to slip it under their coats and walk out.

"They were very strict with me, and ordered me never by any chance to steal anything for myself. I was to hand it over to them, or push it toward them. I was to fold things just so, according to orders.

"One day I got nervous and folded an expensive shirt waist wrong, and it became wrinkled under the coat of one of my teachers. Well, they gave me 'Had Columbia' for ruining the waist. It wasn't ruined, either.

"One day we were in a department store and I had slipped some stuff to one of my partners and he had put it in his coat when I saw a woman detective looking at us. I gave my partner the danger signal. We walked toward an elevator, and he whispered to me that we'd go up two flights and see if the woman followed us. We soon found she did. We tried to get out, but were stopped and searched. Well, nothing was found on us, and we were released.

"How the dickens that man dropped the bunch of silk I had pushed toward him is more than I know to this day." Miss Woods said she took lessons in shoplifting at Gimbel Brothers, Wanamakers, and that she and her instructors got away with $1,000 worth of goods at the Du Barry Shop, Inc., No. 1051 Broadway.

The same night, she sold two waists to actresses at No. 780 Eighth Avenue, where she also roomed, and on the following day, she climbed over fire-escapes into their rooms and stole the waists and $100 cash. She said she did that piece of work on her own initiative. The actresses whom she robbed were Mildred Doyle, Hazel Edwards and Iris Devine, members of the French Model Company.

The girl is pretty and attractive. She said she was born in Troy; that her father was a printer, and that she lost her mother when she was eight years old. She said she had been knocking around a good deal since then. She told detectives that she had a wealthy aunt in New York who had sent her to the exclusive Ladycliff

She refused to give the aunt's name. The girl was arrested in Boston with her two confederates who were sentenced to jail. She was brought to New York by Detective Brenick. Alice was arraigned in the West Side Court this morning and held for trial.

OSCAR IN AN ENCOUNTER.

Hammerstein Takes Possession of Offices in the Rialto.
The Rialto Theatre, which is nearing completion on the site of Hammerstein's old Victoria, Forty-second Street and Seventh Avenue, was the scene of a spirited encounter yesterday when Oscar Hammerstein entered the building against the wishes of the Rialto Theatre Corporation.

Each side claimed victory to-day. Mr. Hammerstein asserted he had finally taken possession, and the Rialto forces said he had been forced to leave. A couple of watchmen were knocked down and one narrowly escaped impalement on the point of the impresario's cane," said the Rialto story.

Over the telephone Oscar said that in the contract he was to have offices on the first floor and possession of the
